More of Dave's Adventure's.....

Hi to all,

I hope this finds you in good health. After enduring the over zealous Customs Officers at Vancouver Airport, I arrived at Toronto and booked 4 nights at reasonable rates, Again made use of both public and guided tours taking in Niagara Falls, very impressive area and the plastic raincoats are a help.

Niagara on the Lake was part of our tour, with Fort George and finishing with a wine tasting on the way back to Toronto. Next day more museums then on to Montreal. Spent the day there wandering around the Latin Quarter—couldn't speak French, and I was fed up with big cities so kept travelling east to Sydney in Nova Scotia, then on to Port aux Basques in Newfoundland by sea ferry, about 140klms out. The hospitality shown to me here was incredible, these people are unique. Any way moved back to the mainland and onto Truro, its the hub of Nova Scotia. More museums!!!! then train to Montreal and bus to New York, Stayed in New Jersey and did as much sight seeing around as possible. Could spend months here.... Ellis Island, and the Statue of Liberty, a walk down Wall St. and around Ground Zero taking in a couple of churches etc. Out to Newark and bus to Pittsburgh, then southeast to Washington DC. More touring taking in the Pentagon and Memorial also a hop on and hop off bus tour. Stayed at Alexandria then on to Richmond Virginia then to Rayleigh, Capitol of North Carolina. Best museum I've seen to date, it answered a lot of questions, and gave me a good incite to what happened here. I'm in Charleston now and am going to Orlando tonight. Charleston is packed full of history also and deserves a longer stay. Digit is cramping up so will close now.

Regards Dave Banister. XXXX for the sheilas.

Is this now the best looking Dunny around or not?

Warne Wilson, Ron Donald and their band of helpers have completed the huge task of tiling the toilet block. Certainly better than the mud stained concrete and will be a lot easier to keep clean.

Inexpensive Self-Adhesive Paper

Instead of paying for expensive self-adhesive paper or A4 labels, or printing on plain paper and messing around with spray adhesive I make my own from a roll of clear or white shelf liner paper.

I found a roll of shelf liner at a national retailer for about $5. I cut the roll into fifty-two 210 x 297mm sheets. This reduces my cost to about $0.10 per sheet.

If you cut carefully, you can run the sheets through an ordinary copier or printer like any other sheet of paper. Peel the shelf liner paper off of the backing paper and stick it onto your blank. Unlike commercially available labels, the shelf liner is easy to remove after you've cut the pattern.

Here's a tip for the Turners from the pages of Fine Woodworking Magazine.....

Turning copies of a spindle on a hand lathe can be tedious work. Templates, gauges and other gadgets help but don't substantially increase speed and accuracy. In contrast, this method, which uses the bandsaw, is the best turning aid I've found yet. On one face of the square stock, mark out with a template the desired profile and make bandsaw cuts to within  $\frac{1}{16}$  in. of the profile at convenient reference points. Bevel the square's corners as you usually do, mount the stock on the lathe and begin turning. The cut lines will be easy to see and will allow quick and accurate shaping without so many stops for caliper checks. The secret to this method is accurate layout and careful sawing.

Timber Flow Report

Hi All,

The Kiln was topped up last week with some Silky Oak, Camphor Laurel and a large piece of Red Cedar, We hope to have it all ready for use in about two months depending on the weather.

I will be organizing a working bee in the near future for the break down saw as we have a quantity of Red Bean that needs to be cut into usable planks, as the slabs have been sitting in the racks for an extended period and some of it is starting to deteriorate. A number of our members are not keen on using Red Bean as it can irritate the nasal passages and lungs and in some cases it can even cause nose bleeding. This is why face masks or breathing apparatus should always be used when machining or sanding this timber.

Storage of wood, seasoned and unseasoned is an ongoing problem as our stock is steadily increasing as can be seen by the flow of logs into our rear yard (no longer on the Tennis Club Lawn). As mentioned in my last report, the club was considering inspecting all timber held in our racks and removing any poor quality or damaged stock. It has been decided that this will be the first step in upgrading the clubs storage facilities. We will be requiring a few volunteers to help with this process in the near future....could any members who are interested please contact one of the committee members.
